The Future of Man

—Is It Predictable?

AT LEAST since the 17th century, when Hobbes wrote his Leviathan, the idea of a science of man has fascinated some thinkers. They would base this science rigorously on mathematics and make it as certain as physics in its predictions about human behaviour.

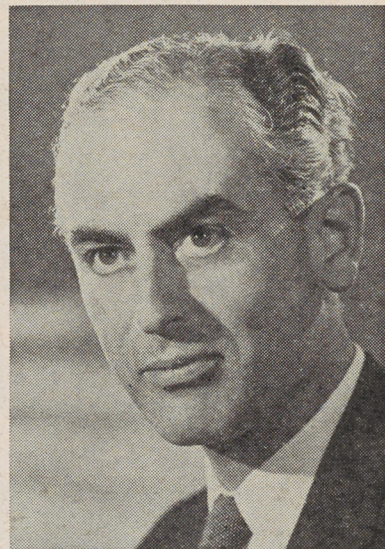

Some thinkers believe that psychology will explain the behaviour of men as individuals in terms of strict causal laws, perhaps expressible in mathematics. Others believe that if the behaviour of the individual cannot be pinned down, that of large groups of people can be, by statistical analysis.

In recent years considerable controversy has centred around this question of the statistical investigations of human population, and the validity of predictions based on them. How much faith can we put in these economic, sociological, biological and other predictions? Latest discussion of the question comes from Professor P. B. Medawar, C.B.E., F.R.S., Jodrell Professor of Zoology in University College, London. He is speaking on the Reith Lectures, an annual series of talks originating on the BBC, and beginning this Monday night on CBC radio. The series is called The Future of Man. Perhaps a quick look at the background against which Professor Medawar discusses the question will be helpful.

The belief in a science of man is often strengthened by an analogy with the physical sciences. For instance . . .

A simplified law from physics: If you increase the temperature of a gas by, say, five degrees, the pressure of that gas against the walls of its container will increase by a calculable amount (provided other things are equal).

A simplified law from economics: If you increase the supply of a commodity on the open market, the demand for that article will tend to increase (again provided other things are equal).

Now in physics temperature and pressure are linked by the velocity of the molecules making up the gas. Increase the temperature and the average velocity of the molecules increases, they strike the walls of their container more often and more violently, and so increase the pressure on those walls.

In economics, the price set by retailers relates supply to demand (just as molecular velocity relates temperatures to pressure): increase supply and the retailers, in competition with one another, will lower their prices; demand will then increase, because the consumer will buy more with the same amount of money.

Both laws stipulate that other things be kept equal. In the physical law only one other thing, or variable, is involved: the volume of the container which must not vary like a balloon; this can easily be kept constant. But in economics, any law can be affected by a multitude of variables: for instance,

TUESDAY ON PROJECT '60

—CBC Radio

HE isn't a Beat. But he has more intimate knowledge of the Beat Generation, Beatnik philosophy, habits, hangouts, lingo and probable future than anyone else on this continent. John Hamilton is no dungaree and sneaker-clad hipster. He is a big, hulking newsman with untidy hair and a stupendous moustache who has managed to get the confidence of Beats from Greenwich Village to San Francisco, from Montreal to New Orleans, while travelling on news assignments and a Ford Foundation grant.

Almost a year ago Project '59 presented his startling, personal account of the Beat Generation.

It sparked a flurry of articles and conjecture about Beats, and listener reaction was overwhelming. Tuesday night (Jan. 15) Project '60—and John Hamilton—take another look at the Beats, and, with the help of overseas reports, at the Beat atmosphere in London and Paris.

Frank Freedman of the Project '60 staff who gave us the lowdown on the show, says: "Hamilton makes some criticism of the Beats, but it isn't sharp. He believes they're sick in a sense, but it's a symptom of a deeper sickness in the society that has produced them. They have rejected materialism, any form of it, and although they're nihilistic, they still feel that their spiritual revolt against society may be the forerunner of a general spiritual reformation in the U.S."

He went on to say that "as you'll hear on the show, Beats can be brilliantly articulate, and although shocking sometimes make you sit up and think. They believe that the mind exists on several levels, and the greater part of society is trapped into living and thinking on one level. They justify their use of marijuana and depressants by saying that these things help them to become aware of and explore the other five or six levels of the mind."

The illustrations for Tuesday night's show are all on-the-spot recordings in the "pads" where Beats live, the cafes where they drink, and the parties they attend, with the background noises and casual remarks left just as they fell on the tape-recorder listening inconspicuously nearby.

Kerry Ellard, who reports from the Paris Left Bank and Montmartre, is a young Canadian freelancer who has been living in Paris for a few years, reporting on and off to CBC radio's Assignment. Ray Sonin, who describes the Beat atmosphere in London, is an English novelist, columnist and broadcaster who recently returned to Britain after three years in Toronto.

The music of the late Charlie "Bird" Parker whom the Beats all idolize is used throughout the show, along with other "way out" jazz combos. Several poets are heard from: Allen Ginsberg, probably the best known of the really Beat writers; Gregory Corso, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Brother Antonius, and Leonard Cohen, a Montrealer who has just received a Canada Council grant to finance an extended writing-tour of the Near and Fast East.

PREMIERES of three unusual intimate operas will be presented on CBC Wednesday Night this week.

They are the Canadian premiere of Le Diable boiteux (The Devil in the Bottle) by Jean Françaix, sung in French; the world premiere in English of The Diary of a Madman by Humphrey Searle; and the Canadian radio premiere of Une Mesure de Silence (Silent Measures) by Maurice Blackburn, sung in French. Charles Houdret will conduct, and the operas will be presented in CBC's Montreal studios with Hugh Davidson producing, Charles Reiner as solo pianist and repetiteur, and Gilles Potvin as artistic adviser.

Le Diable Boiteux

Françaix' witty chamber opera is set to the composer's own adaptation of Lesage's picaresque tale of the devil in the bottle. It is night in Madrid, roughly somewhere between 1650 and 1760. Don Zambullo, an amorous young student, makes a hasty exit from his lady-love's boudoir, speeded on his way by some hired thugs. Padding swiftly across the moonlit roofs he finds a hiding place in a conveniently empty attic. At least, he thinks it is empty until he senses that somebody or something is there, too. He's right, and it's the Devil, who has been imprisoned in a bottle by an angry magician. His curiosity piqued, Zambullo allows the Devil to escape, and in gratitude Old Nick magically opens the roofs of Madrid and allows him to see all that goes on there at night. And then, when this is getting dangerously near the knuckle, he transports Zambullo to the Witches' Sabbath. The orgy is in full swing and everyone in fine fettle when suddenly the Devil spies the rascally magician who had squeezed him into the bottle. The magician claps eyes on the Devil at the same time, and before you could say Don Ceophas Zambullo, the Devil is back in his bottle jail and fighting mad again. As for Zambullo—he suddenly finds himself in his own bed. It is morning, and rather than get up after such a strenuous night, he pulls down the blinds, rolls over and goes to sleep.

Tenor Jean-Paul Jeannotte will be heard as the Devil, and baritone John Boyden as Don Zambullo and the narrator.

The engaging spontaneity and wit of Françaix' style is illustrated in numerous ballets, musical comedies, operas, songs and orchestral works. One of his most successful creations is Les Demoiselles de la Nuit, a fantastic ballet about cats, written to a scenario by Jean Anouilh. One of the most amusing is Le Diable boiteux, first performed privately in 1937 at the home of the Princess Edmond de Polignac, and on BBC radio soon after.

Diary of a Madman

Hermann Scherchen commissioned Humphrey Searle to write The Diary of a Madman for the Berlin Festival Week of 1958. It was first performed there on Oct. 3 of that year, with rave reviews. Searle adapted the text from Nicolai Gogol's grotesque story of frustration and despair. The scene is St. Petersburg in 1833. Popochristin, a middle-aged, unhappy, ugly clerk in some backwater government department is accused by his Chief of Section of having romantic feelings for Sophie, his Director's daughter. This is indeed true, and the realization that much as he loves her he could never aspire to anything as exalted as flighty young Sophie affects poor Popochristin's reason. He stays away from the office, imagines that Sophie's dog is mocking him, builds up his frustration with impossible desire for the girl, and finally breaks down completely.

Summoned peremptorily to the office of his Chief-of-Section, Popochristin countersigns the orders under his new personality—Ferdinand the Eighth, King of Spain! and is carted off to the asylum. There his tortured mind takes his fellow inmates for Grandees and his Keeper for the Prime Minister. The Keeper, not understanding, beats him and Popochristin cries: "Mother, save your poor son! Drop a tear on his aching head! See how they torment him! Mother, have pity on your poor, sick little boy!"

Tenor William McGrath will be heard as Popochristin; soprano Renee Baumier as Sophie and the dog Madgie; baritone Napoléon Bisson as the Chief-of-Section and the Keeper of the asylum; and soprano Eve Gagnier as the dog Fido.

Humphrey Searle is an English composer who produced BBC music shows for some years (interrupted by service in British Intelligence and with the paratroops during the Second World War) and he later became musical adviser to the Sadler's Wells Ballet. He has a fine ear for chamber instrumentation, and is perhaps the best known for his trilogy for voices and instruments: Gold Coast Customs, The Riverrun and The Shadow of Cain, set to words by Edith Sitwell and James Joyce.

Une Mesure de Silence

Maurice Blackburn composed Une Mesure de Silence to a charm-

PROGRAM NOTES

JANUARY 10

See also page 4 of next week's issue for possible changes in these notes and additional program information.

Dateline U.N.

CBC correspondent Stanley Burke and a panel of four foreign correspondents interview V. V. Kuznetsov, Russia's first Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs and Vice-Chairman of the Russian delegation to the last U.N. session, on such subjects as disarmament, Tibet, and control of outer space.

Happyland

When the 1914-18 war came Happyland was forced to close its gates. On this last program of the series we say goodbye to the Altones, now privates in the army, Kerr Wilson, now a sergeant, Donna Andert, and Jake Park and his band. Along to join in the farewells are the Van Dorn Sisters. (This program was seen Dec. 28 in Winnipeg).

Junior Magazine

From Eskimo-land, across the Bering Straits and south to Japan, viewers are taken by the magic of film to watch Japanese children preparing for and celebrating the Japanese New Year. Guests participate in Junior Magazine's quiz, and Young Canada visits a Toronto fire hall. Other features include shots of a junior plowing match in Western Canada, and an Alberta game farm.

Citizens' Forum

This week — Do You Want More Canadian Programs on TV? The Board of Broadcast Governors has formulated a policy on this question, but the practical implications are still being disputed. Today — three days before the BBG opens hearings for new "second station" licenses in major Canadian cities—the following panelists will discuss the practical problems involved in Canadian programming: H. S. Stewart, manager, CHCT-TV, Calgary; Eugene Hallman, director of network programming (English) for the CBC; R. B. Collett, advertising director, Lever Brothers Ltd., and a director of the Association of Canadian Advertisers. Gordon Hawkins is chairman. The program will also include an interview with Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, who will explain the philosophy of the Board on the subject of Canadian programs on television. Producers: Len Weinstein and Paul Wright. From Winnipeg. (To be rebroadcast Thursday night on radio).

Heritage

Begins a new 10-week series of religious dramas and documentaries

SCENE FROM "THE SAINTS," a drama about an Anglican priest and the guidance he gives a group of boys in an unusual club called "The Saints." The film, first in the 1960 religious series, "Heritage," will be seen this Sunday on CBC-TV.

"Heritage" Returns

Ten new programs on the work of the Church in Canada

Executive producer Allan Wargon got some surprises when the cameras started rolling for Heritage, which begins a new 10-part series this Sunday afternoon on CBC-TV. It is the religious series, you may remember, which got such enthusiastic response last year to its dramas and documentaries about aspects of the work of the main religious denominations in this country.

The first production this year is a drama about an unusual Anglican boys' club called The Saints. Actual members of the club played in the film. "They responded well to direction," says Wargon, "and appeared so natural and unembarrassed that we were all amazed. And their experiences in making the film got them so interested in acting that they wanted to form a drama club. Unfortunately nothing came of it." But their interest was sparked by something that took them out of themselves, gave them a means of expression new to them. Like most performers in the series, they have not seen the results of their efforts yet, and undoubtedly there will be numerous excited Saints watching TV on Sunday afternoon.

An acting discovery who is pursuing his new interest is Daniel Gryte, not yet a teen-ager but with promising career possibilities opening up for him.

"We discovered him during auditions of dozens of kids for the role of a boy who goes to a Baptist summer camp in a drama called Morning Watch," says Wargon, to find exactly the right child for "We went to a great deal of trouble the part, and it certainly paid off. He had never acted before, but he turned in an outstanding, sensitive interpretation, a real performance, not just an appearance as himself. And now I understand he's in demand for other roles."

Some of the films were made on location, which often gave the produced by the CBC in co-operation with the National Religious Advisory Council. The Saints (Anglican) is the first film in the new series—a drama about a real-life Anglican priest in Toronto and his work with delinquent boys. Cast includes Peter Mews, Art Jenoff, Arch McDonnell, John Clark, Ray Bellew, David Somerset, Barry Lavender, Dennis Stanway, William Ferguson and Berney Hayes. Written and directed by Phillip Hersch.

Ed Sullivan

Magician Kalanag and comedians Wayne and Shuster will be among Sullivan's guests this week.

vocalists Allan Blye and Donna Miller, announcer Rex Loring, and Rudy Toth's orchestra. Today's guest is Lotta Dempsey, Toronto Daily Star columnist, who returns to recount more of her experiences in the newspaper world. From Toronto.

Let's Look

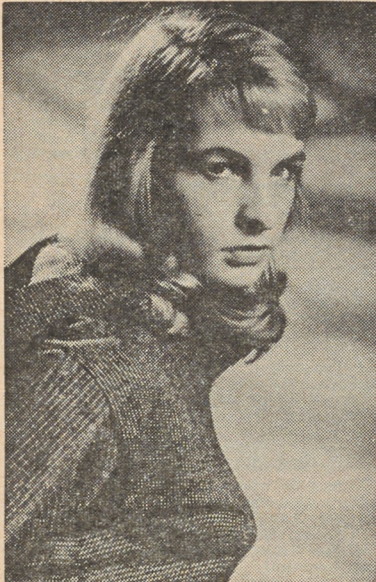

Let's Look at Seagulls. Today's program investigates the seaport world of seagulls, their persistence, their squabbling nature and their greediness. Viewers see them following ships, and observe their life and habits.

Youth '60

Teen-age show, with hosts Tommy Common, Penny Williams, and Dennis Crothall. Today—What Constitutes Good Taste? On hand to discuss this question with the regulars will be architect and interior decorator Joan Burt and photographer-teacher Leslie Holmes of the Ryerson Institute. Miss Burt will also contribute some hints on interior decorating, and Mr. Holmes will discuss photography as a hobby. From Toronto.

CBWT—How About That!

Today Jim Mitchell presents a film, "Speaking of Hounds," showing how bloodhounds, coonhounds, basset hounds, beagles and foxhounds are used in hunting. Jim's guest is Mr. Ross Murray of the Winnipeg Humane Society, and a film of the Society's Winnipeg shelter will be seen.

JANET REID

Winnipeg-born actress, appears with Kate Reid (no relation) and Bob Goulet Sunday on "G.M. Presents."

"locals a chance to strut their stuff in crowd scenes, if not in actual speaking roles. "They all took to the job like pros," Wargon recalls. Among them was an 85-year-old woman who played herself in her own home and did a marvelous job.

At Armagh, the Presbyterian home in suburban Toronto for unmarried mothers, professional performers played the roles of the girls, of course, but the girls were all intensely interested in the progress of the film. They would sit in rows of chairs specially placed so they could watch the players representing them, and they followed the dialogue and action closely.

A cameraman was called on for a feat of courage during filming of Le Bon Dieu en Taxi, the story of a group of Montreal priests whose parishioners are taxi drivers and their families. These priests drive cars identical to police cars, with a siren and flashing red lights, to enable them to get to the scene of an accident as quickly as possible. To film a necessary sequence in the drama, cameraman John Foster crouched beside the driver with his feet against the instrument panel, his camera between his knees, shooting through the windshield. It was entirely unrehearsed. The car streaked through the streets at top speed, weaving among traffic, braking and turning dangerously, avoiding accident after accident by a hair's breath, while police waved it through. Foster had to be almost pried out of his position after the car stopped. "He was petrified with fear," Wargon recalls, "but he got some exciting and startling feet of film!"

Sometimes the production crew rolled their cameras at odd hours. When making a film about the Salvation Army Officers Training College in Toronto's Davisville district, in which the big Army band was to take part, it was found that the daytime and evening jobs of its members eliminated any shooting before midnight. So, at 2 o'clock in the morning the big band assembled in the street with the uniformed professional actors, and, as the cameras ground away, marched up the road loudly playing Onward Christian Soldiers.

Heritage was planned by W. J. Dunlop, head of the CBC religious programs department, Rev. Brian Freeland, assistant supervisor, and Helen O'Brien, program organizer, in co-operation with the National Religious Advisory Council.

Although each episode is rooted in a denominational setting, Mr. Freeland emphasizes that none has a denominational "pitch." The dramatized problems are common to all churches, and this year the emphasis is on more off-beat aspects of their work. "We have learned a good deal from our last series, and I feel this one is much superior technically and dramatically—smoother and more professional," he says.

The programs will be presented in the following order:

Jan. 10—The Saints (Anglican). A drama about an Anglican priest and the spiritual and material guidance he gives a group of boys in an unusual club called The Saints.

Jan. 17—A Critical Choice (Lutheran). The story of a pastor of the Lutheran University Chapel and his effect on the life of a young and immature university student.

Jan. 24—The Great in Heart (Salvation Army). The experiences of an over-zealous girl at the Salvation Army Officers Training College.

Jan. 31—A Sense of Adventure (Roman Catholic). The story of a co-operative housing movement in which a priest organizes his parishioners in building new homes and new lives.

Feb. 7—Morning Watch (Baptist). A documentary following a boy through his experiences at a Baptist summer camp, where he discovers religion to be real and vital.

Feb. 14—I'll Sing, Not Cry (United Church). A documentary filmed in Africa, showing how Christianity comes to an African village with the guidance and help of the United Church.

Feb. 21—Program cancelled for a special report on the Winter Conference.

Feb. 28—Armagh (Presbyterian). The dramatic story of Armagh, a Presbyterian home for unmarried mothers, seen through the experience of one young resident.

Mar. 6—The Faithful Optimists (Anglican). A documentary depicting the life of an Anglican missionary working with the Eskimos in the North.

Mar. 13—Le Bon Dieu en Taxi (Roman Catholic). Filmed on location in Montreal. The true story of Rev. Paul Aquin and his church on wheels, which serves the spiritual, social and material needs of 15,000 taxi drivers and their families.

Mar. 20—Bombshell in Braemar (United Church). A drama focussing on the country church and its enriching influence on the lives and faith of strangers it brings together.

If films and television are rightly used I have no doubt at all that they can be an enormous help in education. But the personal element, the teacher, will always be indispensable."—Film critic Dilys Powell on BBC Overseas Service.

SUNDAY TV NOTES

G.M. Presents

"Here Today," an original teleplay by Andy Lewis, starring Robert Goulet and Kate Reid—produced by Melwyn Breen. A love story set in the Niagara fruit belt. Goulet plays the role of Laz, a "fruit tramp" who persuades Nina, the wife of Paul, a crippled peach grower, to hire him and within a week becomes almost indispensable. But one of the neighbours, Ben, insists that Nina fire Laz. Nina refuses, even when her husband Paul makes the same demand. Cast: Kate Reid as Nina; George Luscombe as Paul; Peter Mews as Ben and Janet Reid (no relation to Kate) as Ellie. Others: Walter Balay, Larry Reynolds, Paul ing libretto by his wife, Marthe. The story deals with Martine, who, like most wives, likes pretty things which are more than her husband, Antonin, considers he can afford—especially since he has developed such miserly inclinations that he even counts the matches in the box! Martine plans to buy a beautiful yellow dress, and her plot is abetted by Bobino, both as his own self, an "artistic" photographer, and as his disguised self, a learned and insistent doctor. The scene is a suburb of Montreal about 1908-1913, and M. Antonin is described as "a middle-middle-class French-Canadian." Written five years ago, the opera has been presented in Toronto, and in Mon-treau on both stage and television. Its most recent performance was last summer in a successful run at Montreal's St. Helen's Island theatre, La Poudrière, with the same cast as the one you will hear on CBC Wednesday Night: bass-baritone Yoland Guerard as Antonin; soprano Eve Gagnier as Martine; and tenor Jean-Paul Jeannotte as Bobino.

Jack Benny Show

Comedian Ben Blue makes one of his infrequent television appearances this week when he visits Jack Benny on the "Jack Benny Show." In this comedy romp, Jack characteristically inspires a disaster which fells the fey "Chandu the Magician" (Blue) and then don's Chandu's thaumaturgic robes to impersonate his own guests star. Dennis Day, singer comedian, winningly bungles his job as pseudo-sorcerer's apprentice and also sheds his magical mufti to sing a popular song. Don Wilson, Mel Blanc, Jack Albertson, Benny Rubin and Dick

THE DEAN MARTIN SHOW

On "Ford Startime"

In spite of its Scots name, Blackburn's family has been French-speaking for several generations. Several of his works reflecting both French-speaking and English-speaking aspects of Canadian life have been performed on CBC radio, and movie-goers are familiar with his dozens of scores for National Film Board productions.

Burney join in the half hour spoof of the magic makers.

The Twentieth Century

"The Week That Shook the World," the story of the beginning of World War II. Historic newsreel film unfolds the story of Nazi Germany's move towards the Polish borders and depict the last-minute talks of Europe's statesmen trying desperately to forestall war. The program includes actual news reports made during this momentous week (the end of August and the beginning of September, 1939) by a team of soon-to-be-famous war correspondents—Edward R. Murrow, reporting from London, Eric Sevareid reporting from Paris, and William L. Shirer, reporting from Berlin.

"The Tintype," a mystery tale by Peter Francis, teleplay by Vincent McConnor, set in the Victorian era about a woman who believes her dead fiancé Charles Maddox is attempting to prevent her from marrying a young man named Walter Lamson. Ellen Rutherford believes that Charles has come back from the dead when a number of articles she received from him as gifts are mysteriously broken. When she has a tintype photograph taken of herself as an engagement present to Walter, the finished picture reveals that Charles has made contact with her in still another way. Producer, Melwyn Breen.

Explorations

Big Business—The Canadian Reality. Taking part will be Walter Latman, Group Vice President, Massey-Ferguson Limited; W. E. Williams, President and General Manager, Procter and Gamble Company of Canada; J. R. White, President, Imperial Oil Limited. (See story on page 13).

Big Business

Management looks at itself in six "Explorations" programs, starting this Wednesday

Particularly since World War II the economy of the United States has seen the growth of some vast commercial corporations. Despite differing legal and economic factors in Canada, something of the same trend is apparent here, both through the presence of Canadian affiliates of U.S. parent companies, and no doubt through the conditions of the post-war Canadian economic expansion.

This economic phenomenon has in the States produced a critical school of thought — at times approaching a mystique — among economists, sociologists and political theorists. Such books as The Organization Man by William H. Whyte, and The Power Elite by C. Wright Mills have given popular expression to these misgivings.

The criticisms come mainly under three heads: economically, Big Business is said to negate the principles of free enterprise because a condition of its growth is the elimination of small competitors. Further, as the mammoth corporations get bigger and fewer, the possibility of informal restrictive trade agreements between them allegedly becomes greater, and anti-trust legislation more difficult to enforce.

Politically, critics of the great corporations describe them as anti-democratic since more and more economic power seems concentrated in fewer and fewer hands. If, as The Power Elite suggests is happening in America, top corporate personnel are informally joining similar-thinking top personnel of the armed forces and of politics in a new oligarchy, the threat to democracy is obvious.

Thirdly, the growth of Big Business is said to threaten the integrity of the individual as such — a threat to the possibility of his non-conformity and even to his creativity. For the big corporation allegedly requires teamwork at the expense of individual brilliance, friendly co-operation at the expense of the deep-felt emotional spur to succeed and to know — and this from research scientists as well as salesmen.

Further, the top business executive—unlike the entrepreneur of yesterday—is said to come not from the most creative (even in the team sense), nor from the most brilliant, among an organization's personnel. On the contrary, he is supposed to be the man judged to possess certain almost mystical powers of leadership and of making executive decisions; the top executive is allegedly the man who gets his subordinates to crystallize in one-page memos the various alternatives in a given situation, and then bases his decision on those memos, thereby eliminating any need to explore the situation himself.

So much for one current sociological picture of Big Business. How close does it correspond to the facts of life in Canadian Big Business? How much is myth and how much is fact?

"The most direct way to obtain a reliable picture of how big business works, and of the problems facing it, is to give the business leaders themselves an opportunity to answer questions," says Eric Koch of the CBC talks and public affairs department. With Reeves Haggan of the same Department Koch has conceived and carried out a series of TV programs called Big Business, six half-hour films on the way the Management of large corporations looks at itself.

Host for Big Business is Ralph Presgrave of the Institute of Business Administration, University of Toronto; interviewer is Jim MacDougall, Montreal businessman and graduate of the Harvard School of Business Administration; director is Allan Wargon, who also directed last year's highly successful Explorations program, Men at the Top.

"For this series we filmed 18 separate conversations, then edited them into an effective whole," Koch continued. "Through this technique we can make points

Opening of Parliament

From Ottawa, the ceremonies opening the new session of Parliament. Among the events to be covered will be the arrival of His Excellence the Governor-General, the summoning of members of the House of Commons by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, the procession to the senate chambers, and the speech from the throne—the first for the new Governor-General, George Philias Vanier. (An edited film of this program will be broadcast in the evening).

Talent Caravan

tightly and with logical development, something often difficult to obtain in a live discussion."

"At an early stage in our preparations we sought the advice of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association," he said. "We discussed various ideas at a meeting which proved very rewarding, but we soon saw we had to work with an expert. Management Consultant Ralph Pressgrave agreed to work with us and act as host for the series. We felt that his long experience in the field, and his philosophical turn of mind, made him eminently suitable for the job."

Following is a list of subjects and speakers:

January 13

The Canadian Reality—Is Big Business growing bigger? If so, what are its implications? What are the relations between the Canadian affiliates and the parent U.S. companies? Do the interests of professional manager conflict with those of owner? — Speakers will be Walter Lattman, Group Vice-President, Massey Ferguson Ltd.; W. E. Williams, President and General Manager, Proctor and Gamble of Canada, Ltd.; Jack White, President, Imperial Oil Ltd.

January 20

Decision-Making — Who makes the decision about what? — Stuart Finlayson, President, Canadian Marconi Co. Ltd.; Frank T. Sherck, Executive Vice-President, H. J. Heinz Co. of Canada Ltd.; A. L.

ROY ROGERS

and Trigger are seen Thursday on CBC-TV network stations—4:30 p.m. in Manitoba and Kenora, and 5:30 p.m. in Alberta and Saskatchewan (except Yorkton—6:30 p.m.).

Fairley, Jr., President, Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, Ltd.

January 27

The Human Factor—Who makes a good executive and how can you spot one? In making appointments, how far are you influenced by your own likes and dislikes?—Dr. Harvey Cruickshank, Vice-President and Manager (Toronto area), The Bell Telephone of Canada; J. M. Keith, Executive Vice-President, Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada, Ltd.; Carl Pollock, President, Dominion Electrolhome Industries Ltd.

February 3

The Bargaining Table — How much real freedom of action is there for either side in labour-management negotiations? Why does a strike, contrary to financial good sense, get started? Work-rules—the right of management to assign work—have often been a major issue in management-labour negotiations: does this establish a trend?—D. Alan Page, Director of Personnel, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada Ltd.; Harold Clawson, Vice-President, Steel Co. of Canada Ltd.; W. Allan Campbell, Vice-President and Secretary, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.

February 10

Public Relations—What do you expect Public Relations to do for you? How do you explain its upsurge since the war? Can you be both honest and smart? — A. L. Fairley, Jr.; W. E. Williams; J. A. Fuller, President, Shawinigan Water and Power Co.

February 17

The Ultimate Responsibility — What factors limit the operation of the profit motive? In what ways do professional managers owe responsibility to the shareholders, to the public at large? How do you think people whose jobs have disappeared through technological advance should be taken care of? What is the responsibility of the company? — Lazarus Phillips, Sr. Partner, Phillips, Bloomfield, Vineberg and Goodman; Max W. MacKenzie, President, Canadian Chemical and Cellulose Co. Ltd.; Walter Lattman.

FRIDAY TV NOTES

signer, whose work brings her in touch with people of a widely varied income level, trying to furnish their homes as attractively as possible within a certain price range. Miss Wintermute is also lecturing at the University of Toronto this year on design, so we are delighted to have her on Open House for the next six weeks, to pass on to viewers some useful pointers to keep in mind when furnishing or redecorating. Today the topic will be—what the designer tries to do.

SINKSIDE SCIENCE—IS YOUR IVY NERVOUS? In his first program, Research Chemist John Irwin, reports on plant growth regulators, and one of the things he'll be discussing is plant tranquillizers—used to control the growth of various species. He also has news about materials on the market to make house plants grow as rapidly as possible.

GUEST OF THE WEEK. Wendy Hicks of London, England, was on stage when she was 5 years old, working in a concert troupe run by her parents. During the war, she toured army camps with the show and got experience in comedy routines, sketches, and singing. Being a Jack of all Trades is certainly useful to her now in her job as Women's Editor, CKVR-TV in Barrie Ontario, where Monday to Friday she is hostess of the women's program. Ann Cameron will be talking to Wendy Hicks of Barrie this afternoon.

P.M. Party

Audience-participation program for women, with emcee Alan Miller, vocalists Allan Blye and Donna Miller, announcer Rex Loring, and Rudy Toth's orchestra. Today's guests are the Palermo Brothers, jugglers, and Roland Hennessey, director of children's services with the Catholic Children's Aid Society of Toronto. From Toronto.

Tidewater Tramp

The Stately Homes of Kitsiaski—Romeo Charles invents a myth about the stately homes of Kitsiaski, full of antiques, and is dismayed when he learns that Mr. Biddlecombe, a collector from Eastern Canada, is coming to see for himself. Despite the fact that Kitsiaski has nothing but three tar paper shacks, Romeo aided by Peter and Gail almost succeed in convincing Biddlecombe of its importance.

Darwin Centenary

• I would like to protest the program shown last night in collaboration with WBBM-TV, Chicago. It sounded almost as if we were in Russia. Who do these men think they are, playing God? No wonder we have the idea that America is trying to run our lives, pushing their ideas down our throats regardless of creed.—Mrs. J. McManus, Winnipeg.

The two most active participants in the discussion—Sir Charles Darwin and Sir Julian Huxley—are English.

• Programs of this nature are most interesting and a welcome relief from the uninformative dramas and musicals that saturate the choice viewing hours.—J. E. Harrison, Regina.

Frustrated

• I must ask you to postpone the renewal of my subscription to CBC

Hobby Corner

With Glynn Morris and special guest, Jack Lockett, who gives the second part of his two programs on woodworking projects.

Cavalcade of Sports

This week—the National Individual Matched Bowling Championships, from the Omaha, Nebraska, Civic Auditorium.

CBWT—The Assassins

"The Assassins," by Norman Bortnick of Medicine Hat, Alberta, is a gripping story of premeditated murder. Mr. Bortnick is a relatively new author but by no means an unsuccessful one. Since June he has had more than 12 plays broadcast and besides "The Assassins" another of his scripts will probably be produced in March. Frances Depres, so successful in "Masks at Midnight" plays the lead in this production as Jean. David is played by Joe Mauro, Roger, by Glynn Morris, Mary, by Patricia Scott, and George, is portrayed by Cecil Montgomery. Produced by Jack Phillips. From Winnipeg.

Times until I return to Banff from a visit to California next May. I am afraid that your excellent programs are denied me; consequently the CBC Times would only bring a sense of what I am missing, and as I am on vacation, the thought of my subsequent misery is appalling.—C. H., Los Angeles.

Eye to Eye

• During the last few weeks we citizens of Winnipeg have been treated to what, in my estimation, is the finest television series yet produced by CBC-TV—the local Winnipeg show, Eye to Eye. What we see are matters which thinking citizens have long wished to know more about, and I have noticed that the program has awakened new concern over local conditions even in what you could call the least interested types. This is one of the basic reasons why the CBC exists. It takes some pretty clever producers, directors, interviewers, etc. to accomplish that! I suggest that Eye to Eye be shown to people in other TV centres so that they can do the same great service to their communities.—B. A. J., Winnipeg.

Wings Parade

• I have just finished watching your television coverage of the 35th Anniversary Wings Parade at RCAF Station Winnipeg. You are to be commended. Your coverage equalled the performance of the participants in the parade.—H. W. G., Winnipeg.

GEORGE LONDON

Canadian-born bass, sings the role of Golaud in Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" Saturday on the Metropolitan Opera matinee broadcast.

MUSIC ON RADIO

By BOYD NEEL

ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT we can hear three so-called "intimate" operas. The chamber opera has become extremely popular in the last 20 years, and the main reason for this is probably an economic one. By the turn of the century operatic scores had become so enormous that it was only a very few theatres which had an orchestra pit capable of seating all the musicians required. Such works as Wagner's "Ring" and Strauss' Salome and Electra, which need anything up to 120 musicians, became not only unmanageable as to space but also completely uneconomical as to finances.

After the First World War people began to realize that the day of the vast orchestra was over and that economic considerations alone would make composers write for smaller forces in the future. By the 1930's and 40's this had become an established fact, and we find composers of every country writing a great number of these works.

In the case of Benjamin Britten it was not only a matter of economic necessity but also a question of touring. His English Opera Group has toured all over the world with its repertoire of chamber operas, and these tours would have been impossible with a larger group of players. Britten has achieved almost as much success with the chamber operas as with his "grand" operas, although naturally they lack the enormous dramatic impact of such works as Peter Grimes and Billy Budd.

Canadian composers have also turned to chamber opera, and one of the works on Wednesday night is Maurice Blackburn's Un mesure de silence. Blackburn writes extremely "approachable" music, and was a pupil of Nadia Boulanger, as was another of the composers represented on Wednesday Night—Jean Français. Humphrey Searle, however, the third composer, inhabits a completely different world. His studies were with Gordon Jacob and John Ireland in London, from whence he went to the new Vienna Conservatory, and it was this period of his life which has had the greatest influence on him because it was here that he met Anton Webern, and it was this influence which dictated the future course of his composition.

All Searle's compositions written since 1946 use the 12-tone technique, but strangely enough, the biggest influence on Searle, next to Webern, has been the music of Liszt. It is very hard to reconcile these two diametrically opposed styles of composition, but in his piano sonata, written in 1951 for the 140th anniversary of Liszt's birth, we find a work modelled closely on Liszt's own sonatas and Searle has, in an extremely ingenious way, used the 12-tone method and applied it to Liszt's idea of thematic transformation within one large movement. This sonata is one of the most impressive piano works written in any country since the war.

On Monday the CBC Vancouver Chamber Orchestra will play Honegger's Pastorale d'été. Here again is a work for small orchestra which won a prize for composition. Honegger, a French-born composer of Swiss parentage, will probably turn out to be one of the greatest figures of our time. Originally a member of the group of young Parisian composers who, during the First World War, became known as Les Six, he only entered half-heartedly into their activities, and soon went his own way. Probably his own style was as much German as French (typifying his Swiss origin) and this caused him to lose sympathy with the group.

I was writing in this column recently regarding "descriptive"

Brat Farrar on Dominion Network

What happened to the heir of Latchetts? And who is Brat Farrar? These two questions form the basis of the mystery in an ingenious four-part BBC drama serial beginning this Sunday on the CBC Dominion Network. Cyril Wentzel adapted it from the novel by Josephine Tey, and Frank Duncan is heard as Brat Farrar.

At the age of 13 Patrick Ashby, the elder of twins, disappeared and was presumed to have committed suicide. The story of Brat Farrar begins eight years later, a short time before the surviving twin, Simon, is due to celebrate his 21st birthday and come into his inheritance, a house and a stud-farm in the English countryside.

The plans for the coming-of-age celebrations are shattered by the arrival of a young man claiming to be Patrick Ashby. This is Brat Farrar, a founding who, at an early age, ran away to the United States, where he worked with horses for years, and has only just returned to England. His physical resemblance to Simon is remarkable, and the whole family accepts him as the long-lost heir, with one exception—his "brother" Simon, who remains a coldly implacable enemy.

music and expressing the opinion that music could not "describe" material objects but could only indulge in literal representation of sounds or evoke emotions conjured up by material things. Honegger was one of the few composers who ever managed to write a piece of literal representation which also became good music in its own right. I refer to the work known as Pacific 231. This refers to a type of railway locomotive, and in this famous piece Honegger makes poetry out of the crude noises of the railroad track. The work remains an isolated masterpiece and he never equalled it. His original intention was to write a series of what he called "Mouvements Symphoniques," each of which would have its own title. Pacific 231 was the first of this series, and Mouvement Symphonique No. 2, which he wrote in 1928, was called Rugby. In this he endeavoured to capture the emotions of a football game in music, but he found that Pacific 231 was to remain the freak that it will always be, and the third of the series was merely entitled Mouvement Symphonique No. 3. Honegger thus admitted defeat and acknowledged, in doing this, that music must remain just "itself" to be of any lasting value.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Children's Art. Children's paintings have a quality all their own—brilliant colors, abstract and distorted designs—and mothers are sometimes somewhat puzzled by their representation of quite commonplace things. Sheila Kenyon, freelance writer and broadcaster and mother, analyzes.

The Nurse in Canada. First of six parts. In his introduction to Matinee's special series about the nursing profession, Sidney Katz looks at some of the problems nurses encounter. He examines the nursing shortage, conditions of work, the nurses' relationship with patients, and questions some of the people in the profession ask about those with whom they work. Mr. Katz is an associate editor of MacLean's magazine.

The Compleat Hypochondriac. If the theory that reading or hearing about a disease leaves you with all its symptoms is a true one, we'll soon have more symptoms of more diseases than ever before. There's so much information about disease available to the layman nowadays. Irene Howard, Vancouver freelance broadcaster, diagnoses her own symptoms.

"I believe it is true to say that the chemists and physicists of the world are becoming more and more divided into two main groups; those engaged in taking the atoms apart, and those whose work it is to join the atoms together into plastics molecules of ordered pattern."—Dr. V. E. Yarsley, speaking on BBC.

clarinetist, and Irene Mann, pianist, are heard in recital Monday night on CBW. The program includes two of Mr. Mann's own compositions.

REITH LECTURES

whether the supply is a near monopoly or free; whether the market is saturated or not; whether all members of the market know about the increased supply or not, and so on. These many variables make it difficult to discover statistical laws about people; economists, sociologists, and political theorists are notoriously cautious in predicting coming events—and when not cautious, often glaringly wrong.

The question then becomes: are these difficulties that face the social scientists merely technical difficulties which future refinements of statistical methods will overcome? Will statistical analysis some day catch all human variable in its mathematical net? If we can already sometimes predict how large groups of people will act, will the day come when we can always so predict, and thereby control, the course of human society?

Many people — including many social scientists—would answer yes to this last question. Quite apart from moral or theological arguments, it may be that predictions about a man's behaviour always carry with them the seed of their own falsification. For as soon as a man knows of the prediction about him, perhaps he can always act just so as to falsify it, out of pure cussedness. Some pollsters are already finding that people are beginning deliberately to answer the poll questions one way and act in another.

So much for the general background of what has sometimes been called scientism. In his talks, Professor Medawar discusses his own subject of biology. In his first lecture he says:

"I first thought of attempting a grand prophetic statement about man's future as Homo sapiens . . . (but) the more I have studied these problems I am going to talk about, the more deeply I became convinced that the opinions of the learned are often much less interesting than the reasoning that professes to uphold them; and in the outcome I decided that these lectures were to be about the process of foretelling rather than what is actually foretold."

Professor Medawar calls his first lecture The Fallibility of Prediction and considers some past and current predictions about population growth, particularly in England. He then discusses The Meaning of Fitness from the biological point of view which is not the everyday meaning of "fitness." Are we becoming less "fit" in some sense?—In the third lecture Professor Medawar asks whether, by selective breeding, we can arrive at some sort of generally excellent population and suggests there are certain genetic Limits of Improvement.

In The Genetic System of Man Professor Medawar talks of the biological effects of factors like man's choice of marriage partners, (Please turn to page 25) of the practice of birth control, even of some types of legislation. Is there any truth in the belief that people of mediocre intelligence are biologically fitter than the mentally brighter elements of a population? Professor Medawar uses this example in Intelligence and Fertility to show how great is the need for care when examining such statistical evidence. In this particular case, the evidence is by no means conclusive, he points out. In his final lecture, The Future of Man, Professor Medawar will describe how it is that the human brain has come to give man his special status in the organic world. Because of the unique properties of this "biological device," it is possible that man can envisage a new, non-genetic type of evolution in the future.

In an article in the BBC publication, Radio Times, Sir Solly Zuckerman, an eminent British scientist, wrote, "Fifteen years ago Professor Medawar concluded one of his essays titled Old Age and Natural Death, by pointing out that the age spectrum of the population, that is to say, the proportion of its members within each age group of life, is in many countries slowly shifting towards old age. In 40 years' time, he pointed out, we are bound to be a victim of at least a numerical tyranny of greybeards—a matter which does not worry me personally." Professor Medawar went on to say,

'since I rather hope to be among their numbers.' Professor Medawar has 25 years to go before he joins the ranks of the greybeards—but his past achievement is more than sufficient promise that he is already able to maintain the high tradition of the Reith Lectures."

Professor Medawar has occupied his present post since 1951. He was educated at Marlborough and Magdalene College, Oxford, where he began his research work and ultimately became a fellow of his college. Abroad he has been Prather Lecturer at Harvard University in 1949, Chaffer Lecturer at Otago University in 1956, and Harvey Lecturer, New York, in 1957 when he became a Foreign Member of the New York Academy of Science. He has made a significant contribution to the scientific study of growth, ageing and immunity.

Professor Medawar is married and has four children, one of whom recently graduated in English at Cambridge. He is a keen opera-goer and village cricketer, with a taste for works on logic in his recreational reading.

The Reith Lectures, named after the BBC's first director general and given each year by an acknowledged authority in one particular field, have been broadcast annually since 1948.

"Looking back it seems impossible to conceive that any other broadcast lectures could have immediately captured the public imagination on so vast a scale as did the first lectures which were delivered by Bertrand Russell, and as has been the case with every

Annie Koester's Remarkable Sewing Machine. The day when every woman was her own dressmaker, and when dressmaking was both a profitable and genteel occupation for women, seems to have departed. Jean Sangwine, Winnipeg freelance broadcaster, remembers the dressmaking days of Annie Koester in Brandon in the early 1900's.

Sudanese Wedding. Marjorie Whitelaw, peripatetic Canadian broadcaster who has been reporting to Matinee from such diverse settings as London and Kenya, attended a wedding in Khartoum not long ago. Matinee listeners will hear about it today. They will also hear a song, to which the bride dances in the presence of only the women guests and then again for her husband who is the only man to see or hear it, which Miss Whitelaw was permitted to record.

Maestro at 15. Boris Brott is the son of Canadian composer Alexander Brott. Boris had his first violin at the age of two, gave his first concert at the age of five, and won second prize in an open competition for conducting at the age of 11. He's now 15 and conducts his own orchestra, the Montreal Youth Symphony Orchestra. Aviva Layton, freelance broadcaster and wife of Montreal poet Irving Layton, talks to Boris about his musical background, his other activities and his goals.

"I'm Leaving CBC..."

A program organizer takes the plunge into the precarious world of the freelancer

Marjorie
McEnaney

One morning nearly two years ago Marjorie McEnaney sat up in bed and said to her husband: "Vince, I'm leaving the CBC. I'm going to freelance." "What, after 15 years?" enquired Vince sleepily. "Yes," said Marjorie, her blue eyes bright with that look that means she has made a decision and intends to act now. "Well," said Vince, "what are you going to do for a studio?" "How about that front room in the basement?" asked Marjorie. "O.K., I'll call the carpenter," said Vince, who is one of those rare things, a husband almost always sympathetic to his wife's bright ideas. And that was how Mrs. McEnaney set out on an adventure that has taken her coast to coast and half way round the world, introduced her to hundreds of interesting people, and has been so much fun that she is kicking herself for not heading into it sooner.

Marjorie went full steam ahead. To her advantage was the fact that she knows Canada and Canadians well—she crossed the country 19 times back in the 1930's as business manager for Canadian Chautauquas (a series of travelling dramatic and musical shows) and as sales promotion manager for Elizabeth Arden. But more important, she had been program organizer in the CBC talks and public affairs department for 15 years and knew the do's and don'ts of planning radio documentaries, talks and interviews on current affairs, human relations, and umpteen other topics of wide general interest. "Every time I discussed a program with a freelancer," she says, "I itched to get my hands on the equipment and do the show myself. One day the urge became overpowering, and I took the jump,"—and then realized that she had had no broadcasting experience and the intricacies of tape-recorders were a puzzle.

To her rescue came George Penny, supervising technician in the CBC radio recording room in Toronto, who advised her on buying machines and soundproofing her studio, and CBC producers who helped with voice production. When she had assembled all she needed, and Vince and their 15-year-old son, Frank, had inspected and approved her attractive, business-like studio, she sat down and toted up her expenses. $2,000! She was in over her ears and scared.

Apprehensively she went round to the CBC and came away with a request to prepare two programs for the farms and fisheries department: The Rural Village and The Small Farmer. Before she had a chance to get cold feet she grabbed her portable tape-recorder and went to stay with a farm family near Dundalk, Ontario. Her practical but persuasive manner won subsequent lecturer," writes Sir Solly Zuckerman. "Every Reith Lecturer has approached his task as if he were drawing aside for the benefit of the non-specialist listener, a curtain on his particular world of scholarship, on his experience and on his thoughts. Not surprisingly the ideas which the lecturers have developed have continued as an intellectual ferment for years after the echoes of their words have faded away."

It is certain that the same will apply to the talks of Professor Medawar.

them over and they talked their heads off about country life. Then she moved into the village, set up her recorder in the hotel, chatted with the locals, and later rambled through restaurants and along the street. The warm, personal story of these people's lives, problems and aspirations not only made two successful radio programs but won her an award from the Canadian Women's Press Club. From then on she got her stride. For CBC radio's Cross Section she prepared

Enid Edwards on Prairie Concert

Soloist on Prairie Concert this Thursday on radio is pianist Enid Edwards, a native of Calgary who has returned to Canada following studies in England.

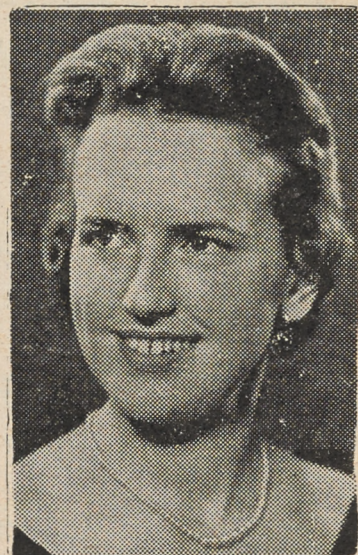

In Calgary Miss Edwards studied with Gladys Egbert until 1953, when she went to London to study at the Royal Academy of Music. Before leaving Canada she won several piano classes at the Calgary Music Festival and studied on on scholarship two summers at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

While studying at the Royal Academy of Music Miss Edwards performed concertos with the student orchestra on several occasions. In 1957 she won the open piano competition at the Royal National Eisteddfod in Wales, and subsequently performed on the BBC.

an illuminating series on the Wardendale Home near Toronto for girls who find it difficult to adjust emotionally to life, followed by a Trans-Canada Matinee series on family counselling, and then she took her tape-recorder into homes and schools across the country for another Matinee series on education in Canada. Later she did programs on alcohol, the white collar girl and various other human-interest topics. In each case she managed to break down shyness, stubbornness, and various antagonisms and get people to speak freely and from the heart. The result was informative programs that struck right at the root of problems with no frills or beating-about-the-bush.

Last August she was invited to visit Red China with a small group of other writers and educators. She had to leave her tape-recorder at home, but she made copious notes on all she saw and heard and later described it for radio listeners in several post-news and Trans-Canada Matinee talks.

When a freelancer produces interviews as intimate and revealing as most of Marjorie's are, we are always curious to know what sort of interviewing techniques she uses. She says she tries to keep herself in the background as much as possible. "I just set up the right sort of climate for the interview—quiet, relaxing, interested but not nosey, and then I look on myself as a sort of receptacle into which talk can be poured, rather than as a guide or provoker of talk.

Where does she prefer to record her interviews—on the spot or in the studio? On the spot conversations, she says, often have a lively spontaneity hard to imitate elsewhere, and have the advantage of capturing opinions of people who might never be enticed into a studio. But she prefers the studio because "it's quieter, more private and the electric machine there will record for an hour without having to be checked. I find that having to interrupt the interview to put on a new tape sometimes stops the flow of conversation just when it is getting interesting. The same thing can happen when you ask too many questions, direct the conversation too much, or when someone in an upstairs apartment throws a whiskey bottle down the garbage chute nearby!"

The sound on tapes can be wiped off and the tape used again, and every freelancer is haunted by the fear that he or she will accidentally wipe off a first-rate interview. When Marjorie was editing one of her programs on marriage counselling she found she had wiped the first four minutes and was nearly in tears until she played the tape through again and found that cutting those four minutes was just what the program needed! That series had another happy ending. Marjorie arranged for separate interviews with a husband and wife who were thinking of breaking up. Neither found out what the other had said until they heard the broadcast. Afterward the husband wrote to Marjorie to say that hearing what each other had to say had given them a better perspective on their problems and they were making great strides in patching up their marriage.

We wanted to know if Marjorie felt that freelancing had affected her personally. She thought for a minute, and then her eyes began to twinkle. "As a program organ-

On Prairie Sports Final . . .

Toronto sportswriter Trent Frayne, one of the regular contributors to CBC radio's Prairie Sports Final (Saturdays), was "born in Brandon a long time ago." Following a year in the Winnipeg bureau of the Canadian Press, he spent four years at the Winnipeg Tribune (as a sports writer), another four on the Toronto Globe and Mail (as a reporter), and another four in the Toronto Telegram's sports department. He was a copy editor for Maclean's Magazine for one year, and a freelance commentator on CBC radio's Sports Page from 1952 to 1955.

Frayne's recent story on the Grey Cup in Maclean's was his 97th in that magazine. (The first, a story on Turk Broda, was published 20 years ago). He has also written for the Saturday Evening Post (his most recent article, on Dickie Moore, is in the Jan. 2 issue), Colliers, True, Sports Illustrated, "and most of the Canadian mags." A new book, The Queen's Plate ("which oddly enough is a history of the Queen's Plate") has just been published.

Trent Frayne is married and has three children.

izer for CBC I'd never thought of myself as a performer," she told us, "and my ego had to have sturdy reins on it—but now it's rampant! I worry more about my clothes, hair and voice. But I have enough sense of humour to realize when I'm becoming impossible, and I take myself sternly in hand!"

She looks as if freelancing is paying off handsomely in health and happiness, but how about financially? "Well," she told us frankly, "I've had as much work as I can handle, and I'm out of the red, but I couldn't support a family on what I've made. If I didn't have the security of an insurance-executive husband, I could never have tackled the job. I hope the day is coming when freelance interviewers will be paid as the full-time professionals they are." Would she take the leap again, knowing all the hurdles, exhausting work and living-out-of-a-suitcase involved? "You bet I would!" she said. "It's stimulating and I love it."

Talk in Ireland is like stout. It's rich, black, treacly, and you gulp it down in pints until you're suffused with a delightful feeling of well-being. As you listen on, every word that's spoken becomes winged, witty, weird and wonderful and then, suddenly again it's the same as drinking the stout—you're out, you can take no more. Gently you tip-toe out of Ireland leaving them still talking.—Wynford Vaughan Thomas, on BBC.
